Polk County Conservation strives to host inclusive, accessible events and meetings that enable all individuals to participate. If you anticipate needing a modification due to a disability or have questions about accessibility, please contact us at 515-323-5300 or pccb_info@polkcountyiowa.gov.
What is Polk County Conservation’s best kept secret?
Without a doubt it’s our volunteers. We have incredible numbers of volunteers doing water quality monitoring, helping plant prairies and even helping out at campgrounds.

And we welcome anyone who wants to get involved. Corporate teams, families, friend groups can all have an impact on our natural heritage by volunteering.

I have to say, volunteering with us is very fulfilling work too.

How is Polk County Conservation working to be a good neighbor in our communities?
Our work can’t succeed or move forward without partnerships.

There are a host of non-profit entities we collaborate with – from trails groups to bicycling enthusiasts to conservation organizations.

We are also in daily communication with your city leaders to make sure we’re collaborating as best we can. These community relationships aren’t just necessary. They’re really positive and good for us all.

One big thing to keep an eye on in 2022?
It’s hard to narrow that down. Polk County Conservation is in the middle of some very exciting projects. I’ll give you two:

First, work on our Trails End Wildlife Area on the east side of Des Moines is really picking up steam. Because it’s funded through a unique federal program, we’ll be able to restore prairies, wetlands and timber faster than we ever have before.

Second, Polk County Conservation is doing great work on organizational sustainability. Soon we’ll be setting up solar panels at six of our shelter houses so public use is more eco-friendly. We’re also looking hard at contracts to install solar panels at some of our major facilities.

See you on the trails!

Richard Leopold,
Polk County Conservation Director
This summer, Polk County Conservation will receive its first influx of cash from the 2021 Polk County Water and Land Legacy bonds. Over the next two years, $21 million in funds will be used to:

- Purchase and enhance Sleepy Hollow Sports Park
- Support the ICON Water Trails
- Improve Yellow Banks Park, Chichaqua Bottoms Greenbelt, and various trail systems
- Foster natural resources restoration, water quality improvements, and land preservation

Additional funds will be distributed every few years over the next ten years. In line with Polk County’s promise to the voters, those dollars will be used to improve or create outdoor recreation opportunities, as well as preserve our natural resources.

We encourage the public to stay involved and updated on PCWLL projects in future years. Visit our website regularly for project updates and public input opportunities: www.leadingyououtdoors.org
Whether you think they are a little freaky or kind of cute, there is no denying bats are a very important part of the ecosystem here in Polk County.

"Bats take care of part of our insect population, like pesky mosquitos. As humans we really like that," said Cassandra Cook, an ecologist for Polk County Conservation. Cook is organizing a project this summer to capture data on the diversity and distribution of the local bat population. To incorporate grounded research practices, Russ Benedict, professor of biology at Central College, has joined the project team.

At least twice over the summer, Benedict and a few of his students will set up mist nets at several locations within the timber of Brown’s Woods. These special nets are designed to safely capture winged creatures. As soon as one is nabbed, the researchers will remove, document, and potentially tag for future tracking. At the end of the monitoring period the team will compile the data to get a big picture look at the quantity and species of bats present.

“We’re particularly interested to find out if there are any Indiana bats or northern long-eared bats at Brown’s Woods,” said Benedict. “They’re designated by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service as a federally endangered and threatened species - respectively. Finding them in our area could provide insights on how the bats are faring.”

In addition to the mist netting practice, Cook is setting up acoustic monitoring at the park. These sound recorders will capture the unique call of each bat for a period of time, ultimately revealing the types of bat species that are utilizing the park, and the timing of their use.

Both Cook and Benedict hope to turn this project into a multi-year effort. The resulting data from a long-term study could help Polk County Conservation and other groups engaged in wildlife management, make critical decisions on how to support habitat for the planet’s fuzzy, nocturnal bat friends.
This spring when you head to the garden center pass on the high maintenance lilies and roses. Instead plant a native garden in your yard.

What exactly is a native garden? Simply, it’s a beautiful flower bed filled with color and fragrance. The key difference between a native garden and an average row of blooms is that they are filled with flowers and grasses that grew here hundreds of years before Europeans arrived. Flowers like the purple prairie clover, wild petunia, and red columbine are authentically Iowa.

Native gardens are also much better for the community’s soil and water health. The unique plants have deep root systems. When it rains those roots drink up water and carry it far into the ground. That means there is less water running off your yard, carrying pollutants into the stormwater system and ultimately into streams and water supplies. The deep roots also enable the native plants to tap into ground water far beneath the surface soil, making them hardier than classic garden flowers in dry spells. The result for you is less time watering when it doesn’t rain.

SEED MONEY

When you are ready to plant your native garden there are a wealth of resources available. There are even programs in place to help homeowners cover the cost. Visit RainCampaign.org to learn about the rebate program in your city.
The other nice thing about native gardens is they are easier to care for. Yes. You should still weed occasionally. There’s no getting out of that one! But there is decidedly less tending needed. In fact almost all native plants are perennials. Once planted they should bloom and then regrow every year with little fuss. More time to stop and smell the native butterfly milkweed!

Want to learn more about native flowers and native gardening before you dig into your yard? Polk County Conservation has opportunities for you to learn and practice native gardening with trained, native plant specialists. From site prep to selecting plants to maintenance, you’ll learn from people who love gardening and teaching. Check out the schedule of gardening events at LeadingYouOutdoors.org.

Bicycling with Butterflies: My 10,201 Mile Journey Following the Monarch Migration by Sara Dykman
Imagine pedaling through a sea of orange and black! Dykman’s journey – nay, adventure – leaves you yearning for a connection with, and a way to protect our planet’s pollinators.

Fuzz: When Nature Breaks the Law by Mary Roach
This is a hilarious read with great stories about the collision of humans and wildlife. Roach offers wit and wisdom along with a vision for coexistence between species.

The Book of Hope: A Survival Guide for Trying Times by Jane Goodall and Douglas Abrams
One of the pillars of hope in this book is the resilience of nature. Page after page you’ll get insights on Goodall’s life and career along with a philosophy for embracing the future.

The Story of More: How We Got to Climate Change and Where to Go from Here by Hope Jahren
Jahren is a trained scientist who writes with clarity for the average reader. If you’re struggling to grasp global warming this is a great primer. The author expertly sets that stage.

CAMPING TIPS WITH RANGER ZACH

Not a seasoned camper? No problem. Polk County Conservation Ranger Zach has tips and tricks to share. Before long these hacks will be part of your annual camping traditions!

- Instead of packing an extra pillow, stuff your pillowcase with clothes and your towel for restful nights and a lighter packing load.
- Wrap your headlamp strap around a large, clear plastic water bottle. Face the light inward and you have an instant lantern!
- Camping food doesn’t have to be bland. Common spices such as salt and pepper, or even cinnamon, can be put into Tic Tac® containers. They don’t take up much space and will spice up your camping cuisine.
- Add bundles of sage to your campfire to keep mosquitoes away. Plus it smells good.
Embrace the chance to learn something new. Find joy in caring for our natural world. Get outside, active, full of fresh air. Your mind and body will thank you! Polk County Conservation has programs for all ages and all interests. Look over this list of events and programs to find what fits you. Most are free. All are welcoming and exactly what you need to make summer memorable. Visit LeadingYouOutdoors.org to register today.
